Cuticura
THE NEW BLOOD PURIFIER
Resolvent
I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribed the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. He did so, and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face, and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months.
Reported by
F. H. BROWN, Esq., Barnwell, S. C.

SCROFULA SORE.
Rev. Dr.——, in detailing his experience with the CUTICURA REMEDIES, said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.
Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results, until I used the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, which entirely cured me so that my skin is as smooth and natural as ever.
I.EN. M. FRAILEY, 61 South St., Baltimore.

CUTICURA.
The Cuticura treatment, for the cure of Skin, scalp and Blood Diseases, consists in the internal use of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier, and the external use of CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP, the Great Skin Cures. Price of CUTICURA, small boxes, 50c.; large boxes, $1.00. CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1.00 per bottle. CUTICURA SOAP, 25c.; CUTICURA SHAVING SOAP, 15c.

POETICAL.

THE FARMER'S WIFE.

Up with the birds in the early morning—
The dew-drop glows like a precious gem;
Beautiful tints in the skies are dawning,
But she's never a moment to look at them
The men are wanting their breakfast early;
She must not linger, she must not wait;
For words that are sharp and looks that are surly,
Are what men give when meals are late.

Oh, glorious colors the clouds are turning,
If she would but look over hills and trees;
But here are the dishes and here is the churning—
Those things always must yield to these.
The world is filled with the wine of beauty,
If she could but pause and drink it in;
But pleasure she says must wait for duty—
Neglected work is committed sin.

The day grows hot, and her hands grow weary;
Oh for an hour to cool her head,
Out with the birds and winds so cheery!
But she must get dinner and bake her bread.
The busy men in the hay-field working,
If they saw her sitting with idle hand,
Would think her lazy, and call it shirking,
And she never could make them understand.

They do not know that the heart within her
Hungers for beauty and things sublime;
They only know that they want their dinner—
Plenty of it, and just "on time."
And after the sweeping and churning and baking,
And dinner dishes are all put by,
She sits and sews, though her head is aching,
Till time for supper and "chores" draw nigh.

Her boys at school must look like others,
She says, as she patches their frocks and hose,
For the world is quick to censure mothers
For the least neglect of their children's clothes
Her husband comes from the field of labor,
He gives no praise to his weary wife;
She's done no more than has her neighbor;
'Tis the lot of all in country life.

But after the strife and weary tussle
With life is done, and she lies at rest;
The nation's brain and heart and muscles—
Her sons and daughters—shall call her blest.
And I think the sweetest joy of heaven,
The rarest bliss of eternal life,
And the fairest crown of all, will be given
Unto the way-worn farmer's wife.

SELECT STORY.

THE MISSING JEWELS.

BY ETTIE ROGERS.

"It hath a plan, but no plot. Life hath none."
—[Festus.

Anne Bardulph was not very youthful, nor was she particularly handsome; and she was housekeeper for the ailing Mrs. Dorman.

This invalid lady resided in a fine wooden house of many rooms, through which ran a wide hall with walls of Pompeiian red, and a gilt edged ceiling that was painted in some curious and uncertain tint of pale, pinkish brown. The floor was tessellated in brown and red, and the dark, carved doors opened upon a columnar portico with broad, brown steps leading down upon a great lawn flanked with thick trees of beech and pine.

Across the greening lawn in the sweet yellow April sunshine, walked Anne Bardulph—a slim, straight woman with regular and severe features, and wonderfully large eyes of darkest gray. She had an abundance of neatly-arranged dark hair, and she was neatly attired in a serviceable suit of some clinging, dull blue fabric, with collar and cuffs of linen—white, prim and immaculate.

Two young men coming upon the portico saw her—an interesting and not unlovely figure moving under the grim, whispering pines.

"The new housekeeper of madame pleases you—her you admire, perhaps," one remarked rather quizzingly.

"Would you suggest that Miss Bardulph may not merit admiration?" returned the other evasively, and with some perceptible irritation.

"I now do nothing suggest," was the protest, in sharp foreign accents. "I here am come to see much, to much think; but I nothing say until the—how say you to it?—till the one exposure grand."

Tony Dorman smoked thoughtfully, for several silent minutes. Finally he tossed away his cigar and turned toward his companion.

"D'Razelly," he began pleasantly, "you are here ostensibly only as my guest and intimate friend—"

"On the what do you call the ostensible I impose not," interrupted Louis D'Razelly, quickly and proudly. "I but the detective am—the servitor hired of madame to her diamonds of value find, and the thief to discover."

"Yes, I know," interposed the young gentleman. "but I have become aware of your worth as a man, and I really regard you as a friend. No friend will ever be more warmly welcomed to my home than you. If I did not feel like this I should not be likely to confess to you that I have been refused by Miss Bardulph—for whom—"he supplemented gently and with hesitation—"I fancy you have a tender preference, even though you would appear to disparage her."

The young Frenchman winced, and in his bright black eyes was an expression of trouble and distrust, as he gazed steadily toward the stately pines that loomed in sharp spires against the sweet blue April sky.

"It is so," he acknowledged, presently, a hot color reddening his swarthy face. "For her I have the one liking that is very tender; but also have I the doubt that is much and not good. What of this do you think"

D'Razelly—who had become a detective only because he had an odd and inborn fondness for what he considered an exciting and most delectable vocation—opened what one would presume to be, from its exterior appearance, a quaintly-bound book and nothing more. It was, however, a "detective camera," by which he had shortly before obtained, and without her knowledge, several striking photographs of the women of whom he had been speaking so dubiously.

"What of this do you think?" he iterated, exhibiting a picture of Miss Bardulph as she was standing in a curious attitude of eager and fearful interest beneath one of the great beech trees beyond the lawn. At her feet, beside a pile of moss and stones, opened a small cavity, over which she was bending, while holding low in a loosening grasp, what was quite surely a number of jeweled ornaments.

"I do not know what to think," enunciated Mr. Dorman, in tones of dismay. "It would seem that my mother's jewels have been secreted in that place; and I should say that Anne has accidentally discovered the depository."

"If that is so, why to you or to the madame honored, she comes not—all so glad, so animate—and tell the one discovery so so happy and not so to be understood?" D'Razelly demanded, with emphasis.

"But—good heavens, Louis! do you mean that you suspect Miss Bardulph of any wrong doing?" was the pained exclamation. "I must absolutely refuse to believe that Anne—that ingenious and serious girl, with her pure eyes and innocent brow—is a thief? Although there may be something indefinable and mysterious about her. I could never associate with the mystery of crime anything she might do."

She was but his mother's housekeeper; she had refused his love, and the name and station he would have given her; yet was he a right royal friend, and would not listen unmoved or acquiescent to any accusations made against her.

While D'Razelly, who professed for her a tender liking, although he doubted much, shrugged his spruce shoulders, sighed, and looked vastly consequential and melancholy, albeit he was not a sentimentalist, and had determined to be austerely practical, as befits a professional of his kind.

"I nothing know of the mystery, not evil, that you do mean," he said, impatiently. "And to me it does seem that the diamonds of much value must now to the madame so disconsolate be restored, and the woman of the eyes pure, and the ways that so puzzling are, must to the custody go."

"But she never entered this house until days after the diamonds were missed," remonstrated Tony Dorman, shuddering; "I am decidedly mystified. What is your theory, or your explanation, of it all?"

"She the accomplice of one other is, I do think," announced the detective, with grandiloquence of manner. "She no longer here will stay. She will an illness feign, as it may be, and then to the other she will go away, the diamonds with her taking, if her we not could prevent."

"That is all very plausible," returned her defender, unconvinced. "But we will at once secure my mother's precious ornaments, and then I really must have positive and irrefutable evidence against Miss Bardulph before I shall allow you to denounce her."

The early dusk had already suffused the lawn with a purple haze. The cool air was delicious with the fresh odors of violets and hyacinths, and sweet young grasses. The new, rosy moon and a great golden star glittered in the blue Western sky; and out among the gloomy, complaining pines the night birds were tunefully calling.

The two young men crossed the lawn and entered the dim grove, full of resinous scents, strange, dreamy noises, and uneasy and fantastic shadows. Mutely and with soundless steps they followed the grassy, winding walk that led to the umbrageous beach of D'Razelly's singular photograph.

Suddenly both started, and simultaneously retreated around a curve of the path where they stood as silent and motionless as the shade in which they were hidden. Beyond, in the pearly effulgence of starlight and moonlight, they saw the suspected young woman bending over that odd repository, from which she removed the moss and pebbles until her intent watchers beheld the cold, inextinguishable fire of the precious gems gleaming within the dank, black mold.

"What think you now?" whispered D'Razelly excitedly. "The diamonds she will take. See! is it not so?"

And before the other could silence or restrain him he leaped forward and confronted Anne, who stood quite still, and only lifted her comely head fearlessly, smiling with calm defiance and some unassumed amusement.

"Hush!" she mumured, imperiously, as he began to speak. "In another moment the mystery of what you have presumed to be a robbery will be elucidated, and precisely as I believed it would be. Look!"

Down the path, with an unsteady and unnatural gait, came a surprising apparition—the figure of a lady. Bare were her feet, and her gray, drooping head was uncovered, and her thin white robes glistened with the damp night dews.

"Mother!" gasped Tony Dorman, amazed and glad for the accused Anne, who was so curiously exonerated.

Straight on came the somnambulist, pausing at length before the treasures she had secreted in her abnormal state, and gazing with unseeing eyes upon the priceless, sparkling things that she touched lovingly with her delicate withered hands, and then carefully covered again with the thick, silky moss. Then she smiled faintly, sighed as with satisfaction, turned and slowly moved away.

The countenance of Louis D'Razelly at that moment was not that of an individual conscious of superior discernment, and the glance he ventured to vouchsafe Anne was deprecatory.

"What I should say I know not," he stammered. "What I did think—what I did do—so very stupid was. Ah, if the kind mademoiselle would me but pardon," he concluded, with gallant entreaty.

Very demurely she assured him that his suspicions were quite pardonable, and perhaps creditable to his zeal as a detector and denouncer of the unrighteous.

Some time later, coming through the handsome, brilliantly-lighted hall, Anne met the young master of the house.

"The tempting reward offered for the recovery of Mrs. Dorman's diamonds induced me to come here as her housekeeper," she explained "I had an inexplicable feeling that I might find the missing jewels. I consulted no one—no one advised me. I was really ashamed of my project, that I knew was quixotic, if not impracticable, and a failure would have made me ridiculous. Shortly after coming to Mrs. Dorman, I learned that she had latterly been haunted by an excessive and increasing fear of being robbed; I learned, too, that she had only recently manifested somnambulic symptoms. The truth came to me as an inspiration, but only by merest accident; and only this morning, while I was exploring for gentian that I did not find, did I espy the tiny, suggestive mound of loose, dying moss, through which I saw a single spark of something shining like a glowworm. So I waited and watched, hoping she would visit her buried treasure just as she did. The discovery was very simple, and is now clear to you all."

"And now you have won the reward you will leave us, I suppose?" he observed, soberly.

"Yes," she gravely assented.

"O, Anne, if I could only persuade you to stay!" he responded quickly and imploringly. "Do you fear I cannot make you a happy wife?"

"It is not that," she said, with frank, serious manner that had always so pleased him. "It is that I could not make you a happy husband. Do be reasonable, Mr. Dorman, for you must be well aware that I am not at all the sort of person whom you ought to marry. And beside," she added, with a quaint little laugh, "I have a profession now, and I must not wed one who knows nothing of the instincts and requirements of my calling."

The handsome young fellow was somewhat agitated by her speech which he considered daring and significant.

"Surely, my dear Anne," he faltered, "you would not wish to become a professional detective? nor would you intimate that you have an affection for Louis D'Razelly who so unjustly accused you, and who would willingly have placed you in custody?"

"My friend," she replied, sweetly, a tear sparkling in each large eye, and a lovely new color on each soft cheek, "we have just now had an understanding—Mr. D'Razelly and I. He regrets his mistake, and certainly he is not so blamable when he would only have acted conscientiously."

"Yours is the logic of love, Anne," the young man answered dryly. "And who may understand the heart of a woman? You will be Louis' wife one of these days."

His prediction was verified. And so it happened that a very happy and satisfactory marriage was effected by the incident of Mrs. Dorman's Missing Jewels.

Stephen Girard.

THE REASON WHY NO MINISTER HAS EVER BEEN ALLOWED TO ENTER GIRARD COLLEGE.

A writer to the press says: Girard was formerly a devout Catholic, whose contributions to the church at times were almost princely. He did not marry until many years of bachelorhood had tinged his hair with gray, and but for a strange meeting would doubt less have remained a celibate. Being the largest ship owner in the world, his business led him to nearly all parts of the globe, and his name was familiar in every merchant port. On public occasion, when a large body of merchants welcomed him home after a long cruise, the festivities of the reception turned from speech-making to a grand ball, at which Girard saw and was introduced to the daughter of a prominent gentleman in Philadelphia, and this meeting which had many singular features about it not necessary to be related here, culminated in marriage.

"It is said by all those with whom I conversed on the subject that Girard's young wife was exquisitely beautiful and a lady of rare polish and education. His treatment of her was that of a proud lover, ever anxious to recite her favor by a bestowal of elegant gifts and a constant exhibition of loving tenderness. One year after the marriage, business called Girard to South America, where he remained nearly eighteen months, and upon his return he was greeted affectionately by his young wife, but her caresses were poison to his lips, for there were unmistakeable evidences, readily apparent, that she was about to become a mother.

"I could add nothing to the facts of this sad story by dwelling upon the scene which followed. Girard's reproach was succeeded by a frank confession from his wife, who named their favorite pastor as her guilty companion. I am not prepared to say of what denomination Mrs. Girard was a member, but my impression now is that Girard had some time previous withdrawn from the Catholic church for some just reason, and that both he and his wife had united with some Protestant sect.

"Girard could not forgive his wife, and she, being a keenly sensitive woman, was so consciously stricken by her great crime that two months after the revelation she became insane and carried to a madhouse. Here she languished for nearly two years when death delivered her of her malady. The church of which she was a member took charge of her remains and gave them burial in a manner commensurate with the great wealth of her husband. A bill of the funeral expenses was afterwards presented to Girard, but he peremptorily refused payment and the matter was about to go to the courts. Discovering the attitude in which such a legal contest would place him, Girard paid the bill under protest, and then, feeling as though the church had stabbed him twice, he withdrew from active life, and realizing $18,000,000 from his shipping interests, concluded to spend $8,000,000 of that sum in founding a college, which he intended should be a permanent reproach to all churches and the followers thereof. His respect for society and his relatives prevented him from exposing the secret which crushed his life, and thus speculation has been left to write the history of his domestic sorrow.

"In the front centre of the main building of Girard College is a large picture of the philanthropist's faithful housekeeper, but no portrait of his wife was ever suffered to come inside the precincts which his will has sought to protect from ministerial eyes, and by which he has secured an intellectual inheritance to many poor but deserving orphan boys.

"Girard survived his wife fifteen years, and now lies under a marble sarcophagus in the main college building.

"I have not written this for the purpose of resurrecting a scandal, but to relieve the memory of a noble man from dishonest aspersions and to answer a queston asked by thousands."

DON'T THROW UP THE SPONGE.

When suffering humanity are enduring the horrors of dyspepsia, indigestion, or nervous and general debility, they are too often inclined to throw up the sponge and resign themselves to fate. We say don't do it. Take Burdock Blood Bitters the unfailing remedy. Price $1,00.

Care of Manure.

Not less important than the making and procuring of this important element in farming or trucking, is the care to be taken with it after it is obtained. A large proportion of the manure upon some farms is allowed to waste simply through neglect; this too after great labor and expense is in curred in its making or procurement. This neglect may not be a wilful one, but it may be the result of custom peculiar to every community, or it may be from ignorance of a few simple rules governing the management of manure.

We have repeatedly seen large heaps of coarse manure piled in front of stable doors and allowed to remain undisturbed, waiting the owner's convenience for hauling and spreading the same, or worse still to applying for hill and drill. In the meantime it will have gone through a fierce heat and become fire fanged to such an extent as to be of very little value compared with what it might have been if properly cared for in time. Again we have seen such as was brought from distances at great labor and expense, subjected to equally bad treatment. The trucker, least of all, is able to suffer this loss, though none can afford it.

We are convinced by experience and observation that great loss annually occurs to farmers from failing to follow a few simple rules for the care of manure. We have all read or heard of the superiority of manure made and kept under cover, which we are not going to call into question here, but every one has not the facilities for keeping it under cover; besides, the trucker who uses large quantities, wants it put where it will be most convenient to get at when needed for applying in hill or drill. One thing is very clear, fresh manure, whether under cover or exposed, needs constant turning with the fork until fermentation begins to subside. We believe in encouraging this heating and fermentation when it can be properly controlled, but if neglected too long it will be the source of much loss in manure. If the manure be coarse and dry it is best to mix with some good composit, but this should not be in such quantity as to prevent heating or fermentation from going on. So treated and occasionly forked over, little or no loss will be sustained by the escape of ammonia.

Where compost is not to be had it is well when in turning to take up earth from the ground beneath the pile and mix with it, covering the heap with several inches of the same. This helps to keep the heat and gases within, and if the heap is turned every few days until well rotted and fermentation ceases, it will keep in good condition until wanted in the spring. The heap should be left high enough to prevent leaching by rain or snow. This in moderate allowances we consider a benefit rather than injury, for all that is held by the advocates of keeping manure under cover.

We have but little faith in the practice of hauling fresh, unfermented manure from the stable or barnyard and spreading upon the land, for the reason that it is then in a raw undecomposed condition, and not in a state ready for assimilation by any crop. Besides, if the manure be coarse, a large part is lost to the immediate crop, and requires time for its natural decomposition. This decomposition or preparation for plant food goes on quickly if it is allowed to ferment before applying; besides, the formation of such gases and chemical changes give additional value to manure. As an illustration we have but to notice the little effect of fresh manure dropped about the field or pastures upon the surrounding vegetation as compared with an equal quantity applied when well rotten.—Maryland Farmer.

She Wanted Comedy.

Three months ago when a new servant girl came to a Brush street family the mistress said she desired to post the girl in advance on one certain little point. She and her husband belong to an ameteur theatrical company, and in case Jane heard any racket around the house she must not imagine that they were quarreling. They would simply be rehearsing their parts. The play began on the third evening of the girl's engagement. The husband taunted his wife with extravagance, and she said he played poker for money, and chairs were upset and footstools kicked around, and threats were made of going home to mother. Next morning the mistress said to the girl:

"Did you hear us playing our parts in the 'Wronged Wife' last night?"

"Yes'm."

"It was simply a rehearsal, you know, and you mustn't think strange of my throwing a vase at my husband and calling him a vile wretch."

Three or four nights after that the curtain went up on a play called "The Jealous Husband," and Jane heard sobs, sighs, protestations, threats and exclamations. The next

THE COLUMBIAN.

G. E. ELWELL, J. K. BITTENBENDER, } Editors.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY, MAY 19th, 1882.

Judge Cummin of Williamsport is spoken of in some quarters as Democratic candidate for Governor.

The Wayne county Herald advocates the nomination of William M. Nelson of that county for Governor.

Though a large number of arrests have been made, there is as yet no clue to the assassins of Lord Cavendish and Mr. Burke in Ireland. Large rewards have been offered for the capture of the criminals.

The argument of Guiteau's exceptions was concluded before the full bench of Judges of the District of Columbia, on the 11th inst. There is hardly a possibility of their reversing Judge Cox, and if they do not, Guiteau will be hung on June 30th.

The Philadelphia Press informs us that "the Bloomsburg Republican says that Senator Wolverton is the kind of a Governor Pennsylvania wants just now." We had not observed any such endorsement of Senator Wolverton in the columns of the Republican, but are very glad to learn on such good authority as the Press that our contemporary thinks just as we do.

The Williamsport Bulletin says Hon. Charles Buckalew has consented to be a candidate for Congress in his district this year. This is "going away from home" for the news.—Wilkes Barre Record May 12.

If the Record had an exchange reader who would take the trouble to ascertain what is going on in neighboring counties, it would have learned that the first announcement of Mr. Buckalew's candidacy was made in the COLUMBIAN of May 5th. It took the Record a week to find out what all the other dailies learned from the COLUMBIAN two days after our publication.

The ten days granted to the officers in which to arrest John W. Dorsey expired on Tuesday. The deputy marshal announced that he was unable after diligent search to arrest John W. Dorsey, that warrants had been sent to New York, Vermont and Texas. The Crier then called Dorsey's name in the usual way, whereupon Mr. Carpenter arose and said John W. Dorsey was present in Court, and had been in the city for ten days. Dorsey pleaded not guilty. The hearing was adjourned until May 25 and Dorsey gave bail in sum of $10,000.

In the eight Republican States of Kansas, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin the Republicans, with 1,865,000 voters, have planned to take ninety Congressmen, leaving twenty-one to the minority of 1,640,000. Small wonder that the Republicans denounce shot-guns, social ostracism and similar alleged Democratic agencies! Compared with a gerrymander in the name of God and mortality, how ineffectual is the bull-dozing or bulldozer! Beneath the reign of men entirely great the pencil is mightier than the shotgun!—World.

The river and harbor bill which has been completed by Congress appropriates $15,000 for the Susquehanna river. It appropriates $4,123,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to improvement of the Mississippi river from the head of the passes to Cairo, including the harbors of New Orleans, Natchez, Vicksburg, Memphis and the rectification of the Red and Atchafalaya rivers, at the mouth of the Red river; $600,000 from Cairo to the Illinois river, and $200,000 from the Illinois river to the Des Moines rapids, which sums shall be expended by the Secretary of War in accordance with the plans, specifications and estimates of the engineers' department of the army which, having been approved by the Secretary of War, may be adopted by the commission for such parts of the river as the commission may not have the survey of. It provides, however, that no portion of this appropriation shall be expended to repair or build levees for the sole and exclusive purpose of reclaiming lands or preventing injuries to lands by overflows. The aggregate amount appropriated by the bill for the improvement of rivers and harbors (exclusive of the amount appropriated for the Mississippi and Missouri rivers) is about ten and one-half millions of dollars.

The Cameron Will Case.

The somewhat famous William Cameron will case was finally disposed of yesterday by the Supreme Court affirming the decision of Judge Elwell sustaining the will. The chief contestant was Mrs. Jane Harrison, daughter of the testator, who receives under the will about one-tenth as much as her sister, Mrs. John B. Packer, receives of the nearly a million and a half of their father's estate. The case has been fought with great ability and much bitterness by a number of distinguished lawyers, and Mr. Packer, prominent as an ex-Congressman of considerable reputation, was severely criticised by JudgeBlack and others in the argument for the contestants, because he had written the will that gave the bulk of the estate to his wife. The Supreme Court, however, take occasion to vindicate Mr. Packer by declaring in the opinion that there is nothing in the evidence "to impeach the character of the gentleman by whom the will was drafted for integritv or professional propriety." It was an up hill effort to defeat the will in the Supreme Court after it had been so broadly sustained by Judge Elwell. He is one of the not very large number of Judges in the State whose legal decisions make the Supreme Court take careful pause before reversing the lower court.—Phila. Times May 15.

The counsel for the contestants were Judge J. S. Black, Furman Sheppard and Charles S. Wolfe. Those in support of the will were Joshua Comly, S. P. Wolverton and Ex-attorney general Wayne MacVeagh. The opinion of the Supreme Court is as follows. "We affirm this decree upon the able opinions of Judge Elwell, which we adopt as the opinions of this court. We think it proper to add that there is not in the evidence anything to impeach the character of the gentleman by whom the will was drafted for integrity or professional propriety. Indeed, his conduct throughout was characterized by the nicest sense of honor."

Cadet Whittaker, the fellow who mutilated his own ears thinking thereby to acquire prominence, is in the West searching for employment.

The Wilkes Barre Record and several other papers that have been playing the independent role, have done just as everybody knew they would do, and are now endorsing Cameron's ticket, as made at the Harrisburg convention. They undertake to crawl through a very small hole by asserting that the slate was broken by the nomination of Marshall for Congressman-at-large; and because one of the five candidates named is not a machine man, they will support the whole ticket. The leaders of the Independent movement do not talk that way, and the Independent convention will be held on the 24th. Charles S. Wolfe says "the ticket is made for war or slavish submission".

Senator Mitchell has been selected as a delegate to the convention, and if they carry out what they say, another Republican ticket will be placed in the field. If this be done there will be an opportunity for the Democrats to exercise some judgment in the selection of their candidates next month. A blunder would be inexcusable as well as suicidal. If we cannot attain victory with a split in the opposition we can never hope for it hereafter. The sure way to defeat the Stalwart Machine party is to join with the Independents in making a ticket that will command the votes of all men who favor reform, and who honestly desire to put an end to the reign of the most despotic dynasty that ever disgraced a state.

THE SCOVILLE—GUITEAU FAMILY.

Mr. and Mrs. Scoville have been having some private differences. They met at Chicago one day last week, however, and had some kind of an understanding.

Mrs. Scoville, when interviewed after her talk with her husband, said that she had dreaded it very much on account of the temper shown by him. He had been writing her very threatening and abusive letters, using such epithets as she did not care to quote.

Among other things, she says he wrote her that if she did not stop lecturing and working in behalf of her brother he "would make it so hot for the three Guiteaus that the two who were not hung would wish they were." She had realized $200 from her New York lecture and was to have appeared in Boston and elsewhere but for Mr. Scoville's interference. Her husband wanted to get possession of their daughter Bertha in order to get the mother also.

In the talk she told Scoville that his attempts at coercion must cease; that she proposed to rent a home for herself and lecture to save her brother. If he does not cease his interference, she said, I will give certain facts to the New York papers and John Guiteau will tell what he knows about Mr. Scoville. "For the sake of my children I will hold the worst for the present." She declared that Mr. Scoville was more reasonable than she had expected, and hoped that there would be no more trouble.

Elastic Resolutions.

Everybody knows that party platforms are synonymous for emptiness, hypocrisy and deceptiveness. When they are not amusing they are generally contemptible. The platform of the late Harrisburg Convention is both.

In a brace of resolutions we are told that James A. Garfield "exemplified in his whole life and public career all those principles which constitute the highest type of manhood," and a few lines further down we are informed that Chester A. Arthur is a "wise, conciliatory and efficient" President entitled to the support of every Republican.

The man or men entrusted with the framing of the resolutions must, in penning those lines, have felt some sense of the ridiculous in commending in the same breath two men whose political tendencies were each the antipodes of the other—one breaking down what the other built up. A eulogy of Garfield and of Arthur is too much in the nature of a ludicrous, if not a painful contrast.

We have no doubt that the leaders of the convention really thought what they said of Arthur, but the Garfield resolution was in their mind nothing more than a mere vapid formality for tickling the "sentiment" of the party.

The Garfield "principles," which they speak of, they gave their most strenuous efforts of their life to crushing out; they knew perfectly well that those principles were never meant for their good; their real view of Garfield is that he was timid, false and treacherous. It is this kind of hypocrisy in platforms which becomes rank and intolerable.—Phila Chronicle.

The Alleged Agricultural College.

The evidence taken recently before the Legislative committee appointed to investigate the affairs of the State Agricultural College was about as interesting as anything of that character could be. It shows in some measure what the people of the state could get for the thirty thousand dollars a year which is paid for the maintenance of the institution. If there is not now there has been very recently every sort of variety in the college, whose principal achievements seem to be quarrels between trustees, rows in the faculty, drunken boys, cigarette smokers, but so far as can be ascertained no graduates in agriculture were turned out.

There would be a good deal of fun in the evidence if the matter were not altogether too serious to make fun of. It is not at all amusing to be compelled to contemplate the picture of boys of ten or twelve years of age smoking the greater part of the time and others but little, if any older, reeling into their classes in a drunken condition. One boy, at least, seems to have had the delirium tremens, and one of the faculty, when expulsion was suggested, said that if boys were expelled for merely getting drunk it would not be long before there would be nothing left of the college. Unless the testimony taken is outrageously false, undoubtedly it is better that nothing should be left of it.

Many of these things have long been known—some of them are new; that this alleged agricultural college is a useless and expensive thing is in no sense new. It has been investigated before and never found to have anything which an institution of that sort ought to have. A committee reported to the Legislature of 1879 that there were eleven professors employed to teach forty six pupils, and that the objects for which the State pays large sums of money are not carried out. The investigation this year appears to be finding out enough new things to justify it.—Times.

Why Mediocre Men are Selected.

Since the Republican State Convention has carried into effect the commands of Cameron in the nomination of the state ticket he and his friends had stated long ago, the question is frequently asked why so obscure a man as Beaver should have been selected as the candidate for governor. This is easily accounted for. The boss is too shrewd and takes too good care of his own personal interests to elevate to power men who might back up their ambitions with superior talents. That this is true has been demonstrated in every instance in which Cameron has nominated a candidate for an important office. It is not the policy of that wary politician to give men of ability the opportunity to acquire patronage, collect a strong following and perhaps let their ambitions induce them to become formidable opponents of the ruling family. Cameron would have been glad to take Beaver as a colleague into the Senate for the same reason that he finds no objection to him as a republican nominee for governor. Beaver has never made a brilliant record as a lawyer and during his short experience in politics has worn the Cameron collar with entire humility. There is no fear, therefore, should he be elected governor of Pennsylvania, that he will be ungrateful enough to oppose Cameron, and should he attempt to do so the boss would feel no alarm, as he well understands that his nominee is a man who lacks the ability to make a great leader. It was with these same considerations in view that Cameron accepted Mitchell as a compromise in the deadlock on the United States senatorship, and experience has shown that his estimate of the man was not far from correct. The men of brains in the republican party in Pennsylvania have no chance for promotion under the Cameron dynesty. —Patriot.

Mr. Frank James, brother of the late Mr. Jesse James, is a marvel of ubiquity. The country seems full of him. He is seen and recognized in nearly every Western city of importance about the time he is reported as promenading Broadway, and at the same time he steps down into Georgia to write a letter Again he is farming in Texas or managing a cattle head on the plains. There is evidently something too much of Mr. Frank James.

Hereafter we shall go to press about three hours earlier on Thursdays, than has been our custom, in order that all mails can be made in the afernoon. All matter for insertion must be handed in on Wednesday, and all communications must be mailed in time to reach us Tuesday night, or Wednesday morning at the latest. No matter for publication will be received on Thursday except in very urgent cases.

Rev. N. S. Buckingham of Lewisburg was visiting friends in town this week.

Dr. E. E. Higbee superintendent of Public Instruction, registered at the Exchange Hotel on Wednesday.

Several communications are crowded out this week.

Mr. Joseph Lamon of Berwick lost his youngest son, Percy, by spinal meningitis on Tuesday of last week.

Berwick has adopted a new lot of ordinances, which were published in full in the Independent and Gazette last week.

John McNeish, an old resident of this town, died at the residence of his son-in-law, C. C. Macmillan at West Pittston, on Tuesday morning, aged 70 years.

Tombstones to mark the soldiers' graves have been received, and are stored at W. H. Gilmore's, where they will be delivered to the proper persons. A list will be published soon.

Lilley & Sleppy are pushing their business at Orangeville with great energy. It is said that the Telephone exchange at that place will be located in their store.

We have received a copy of a very small paper printed at Berwick, and called The Aesthete. Just what its mission in life is, does not appear.

Patrons of the Telephone should be guarded in their expressions. There is no telling who may be listening along the line.

The largest stock of straw hats ever opened in Bloomsburg, at David Lowenberg's. Call and see.

The ladies of the Lutheran church will give a strawberry and ice cream festival on Friday and Saturday evenings of next week, May 26th and 27th in Evans Hall.

The Telephone wires are nearly all up. Rupert and Catawissa are now connected with Bloomsburg, and poles are being erected between here and Danville. It will be completed by June 1st.

Harman & Hassert have made their place of business much more convenient by running a switch from the railroad. They have also built a new addition in which they expect to manufacture mining cars.

Mr. Frank Brockway, a brother of C. B. Brockway, who is a citizen of Salem township, Luzerne county, will be a democratic candidate for Prothonotary in that county. If elected he would make a good officer.

Mr. Morris VanBuskirk, who was well known in this community, died at Williamsport, on Saturday last (May 13) aged 64 years. Of late years he was an active worker in the church and Sunday schools of Williamsport.

A receipt from the collector is the only legal evidence that a tax has been paid. if not credited on the duplicate, and therefore every tax-payer should demand a receipt if he wishes to avoid the possibility of having to pay his taxes twice.

Forsythe & Rockafeller, the Espy merchants, have a supply of the Nanticoke coal which they offer for sale at low figures. As there has been no coal yard nearer than the railroad for some time, this will be a convenience that the people in that vicinity will appreciate.

The last lecture of the course under the auspices of the Lecture Lyceum will be delivered by Col. J. A. Price at the Opera House on Friday evening May 26. Subject: "Napoleon at Moscow." As a public speaker Col. Price has few superiors and he will no doubt have a large audience. Admission 25, 35 and 50 cents.

The Town council having rejected the offer of the Water company for water for fire protection, and no other formal proposition having been made, the work of disconnecting the plugs from the mains began on Wednesday, and now if there should be a fire the Town is at the mercy of the flames. This is progress.

As yet no arrangements have been made for the proper observance of Decoration Day. There was some talk by the fire companies, of taking charge of the ceremonies, the exercises of the day to conclude with an inspection of the fire department. What will be done is as yet uncertain.

Now that the Town has no better protection against fire than it had twenty years ago, the fire department may as well be disorganized. It seems useless for the firemen to pay rent and monthly dues if the facilities for fighting fire are taken from them by the authorities.

Tax collectors should supply themselves with our receipt books which contain recipts for State, county, road, poor, and school tax all in one, or they can be used for any one of them. Books of 50 receipts well bound only 20 cents. Sent by mail for 22 cents. Address COLUMBIAN, Bloomsburg Pa.

Messrs. Forsythe & Rockafeller have purchased of George Ruckle at Espy. his store at the canal bridge, and are constantly adding to their stock. Mr. Forsythe is a merchant of some years experience, having been in the business in Northumberland county. Mr. Rockefeller is a nephew of Judge Rockefeller of Sunbury, and both are energetic and enterprising business men. We have no doubt they will command a fair proportion of patronage.

The largest stock of straw hats ever opened in Bloomsburg, at David Lowenberg's. Call and see.

On Friday last No. 2 school of the Third Street building, taught by Mr. H. Buckingham and Miss Rupert entertained the parents and friends of the children with literary exercises preceding its closing Wednesday, May 17th. The paintings, drawings, flowers, the fine bearing of the children and the interest they took in their work showed the culture and studious habits of the pupils and the instructive ability of the teachers.

On Wednesday evening Col. J. A. Price, of Scranton, delivered an able, eloquent, and stirring lecture; subject: "Napoleon at Moscow." As a public speaker he has few superiors. He held the large audience spell-bound from the beginning to the close, when he was heartily applauded. It was our privilege to be present, and seldom have we been more intensely interested.—The Honesdale Citizen, Pa.

Col. Price will deliver this lecture at the Opera House on Friday evening May 26th. After the efforts of the committee to furnish us with a first class lecture course, they should be given a full house at this, the close of the season.

Reuben Harris was re-elected a constable for Bloomsburg at the spring election. Shortly before court he went away saying he was going to visit his mother. He did not appear at court to make his return, nor did he give a bond, and has not been heard from since so far as the public knows. Milton E. Cox was appointed to fill the vacancy, on a petition presented to the court last week, and the duplicate of Town tax that was in Harris' hands has been given to M. C. Woodward for settlement. It has already been ascertained that quite a number of persons who hold receipts are not credited on the duplicate, and many others claim to have paid Harris, but took no receipts. From all the circumstances surrounding the case we feel safe in saying that Harris has "skipped." It is impossible as yet to tell how much he collected that is unaccounted for, or how many persons there are who will have to pay their tax a second time. The moral of this is, that no man should pay a cent of tax to a collector without taking a receipt therefor.

The largest stock of straw hats ever opened in Bloomsburg, at David Lowenberg's. Call and see.

Samuel T. Dougherty, a young man who wrote a letter to the Philadelphia Times concerning marriageable girls, received among numerous other answers, a communication from Catawissa, signed "Mable Hall." Who she is, if she is a she, we do not know, but we give her letter in full, as she must be a young lady of varied accomplishments—if her letter is not a hoax.

I read your letter to-day in THE TIMES. I am sorry you did not give your address. I would rather have written directly to you. I am a girl of about the age you wish. I was just 20 a month ago, I can wash and iron. Will do up your shirts just as finely as you can have them done at any laundry. I can get you up a splendid meal, when I have plenty to do it with, and on very short notice, too. I can bake excellent bread and tip-top cakes when I have good flour to do it with. My mother tells me I am an excellent housekeeper in all respects. She often goes away on long visits and leaves me to keep house. Besides that I am a lady who can move in first class society. I am a college graduate, and also quite a musician. If you should choose me to be your wife, after having my house work done, I could often amuse you by singing and playing for you. I can do almost anything you wish me to. I can hitch up a horse as well as any man, and curry one, too. I often do for papa when he is busy. I am not very anxious to get married, though. So, if when I meet you, you do not suit me, I'll say no, no matter how much you like me, for I have a good home and don't need to marry if I do not wish to. I generally have a few music scholars and that gives me some extra spending money. But for all that I would rather marry, if I can get a good chance, than to "live and die an old maid."

Respectfully yours, MABLE HALL.
CATAWISSA, Pa., May 6th, 1882.

Rip Van Winkle Again.

The ever-delightful "Rip Van Winkle" is "waking up" lately in tens of thousands of American homes where only his fame has heretofore entered. The Useful Knowledge Publishing Company, New York, has published this and other of the famous sketches of Washington Irving in an exquisite little volume, as beautiful as often finds a place in the homes of ordinary mortals, and at a mere pittance in price—15cts. in Utility binding, 25cts. in cloth, 35cts, in half Russia, and 40cts. in extra cloth, red-line, gilt edges. These are being scattered broadcast as specimens of the quality of book making and of the marvellously low prices of this new publishing company; and they are winning for them the friendship of tens of thousands who delight in beautiful books as well as in cheap and good literature. Enterprising booksellers will supply their publications, and club agents and canvassers are wanted in every county and town, to whom very unusual terms and facilities are given. Catalogues with specimen pages and terms will be sent upon request.

From Center.

County Commissioner Richart has located his saw mills on the farm of ex-Commissioner Pohe and is fast converting his huge pile of logs into marketable lumber. Mr Pohe claims to have about forty thousand feet of walnut lumber which at the present quotations, will bring him a snug little sum.

Mr. William Miller is suffering from erysipelas in his face which has quite disfigured him for the present, but as the disease is now under control it is hoped that he will soon be out again.

Supervisor Frederick Hagenbuch is proving himself to be the right man in the right place by filling the holes in the roads with slate from the hills instead of mud from the gutters. When we saw him engaged at this work last Tuesday with about a half dozen teams we said to ourselves and our neighbor, "Fred knows how to repair the roads. He's our man."

The recent cold, wet weather seems to have struck a fatal blow to the wheat crop in this section. With the exception of a few fields, the present appearances will not warrant more than a half crop. Grass is quite thin and spotted also in a great many fields in the valley.

The school at the Grange Hall, in charge of Mr. Hicks, and the one at Hidlay, taught by Miss Ella Creveling, are well attended and appear to be giving very good satisfaction.

Mr. J. H. Aikman has his house about finished. What next, John?

From Stillwater.

M. McHenry & Bro. and J. F. McHenry have just received their Spring stock of goods and are now prepared to furnish their customers with such articles as are usually kept in a country store.

The recent wet spell has put corn planting back several days, and those who planted are a little uneasy as to its growing; however they report favorable yet.

Monday was a gala day for our esteemed friend Daniel McHenry, as it was the 55th anniversary of his birthday. Quite a number of his friends and neighbors gave him an agreeable surprise. An excellent dinner was prepared and heartily partaken of by all present. Turkey, chicken and trout made up a portion of it, with most excellent ice cream to finish up on. All enjoyed it, but none more than friend Dan. May he live to be surprised many more times.

Our roads are in a very bad condition—worse than usual owing to the large amount of heavy hauling.

Ellis Stoker is busily engaged collecting material to build him a fine dwelling house this Summer. Friend Ell. is one of our most industrious and prosperous farmers.

A drove of very fine cattle passed through here this week for some market down the country.

W. M. Appleman and Boyd McHenry are erecting a large wagon and blacksmith shop in Benton.

We are still anxiously awaiting railroad communication with Bloomsburg. When consummated we will come and see you oftener.

There are now from a dozen to fifteen portable saw-mills operating within one to eighteen miles of this place. "Woodman spare that tree, &c."

Letter from Philadelphia.

CHAT ABOUT LADIES FASHIONS, NEW STYLES AND MATERIALS. PERSONAL ADORNMENT. WHAT IS GOING ON.

Philadelphia, May 15.

The city has had its face most thoroughly washed, and is as clean as a new pin. The northeaster was protracted and dismal but has gone away with less damage than was expected.

AND NOW FOR SPRING ARRAY!

The ladies are happy in the sunshine with their new Louis XV dresses. The new mantle of gauze brocaded with velvet in large designs is very popular. It is draped over the arm and extends down to the waist. The high neck has a turned down collar.

Lyons silks are greatly in favor this spring. Most beautiful toilettes are made of them. They are in tan-color, and many shades of brown, with such floral embellishments as pinks, pansies and daisies.

Toilettes for out-of-town wear are of plain and stamped venetion foulard. The skirt is of plaited flounces, while over the hips are two rounded paniers of plain foulard. The waist opens in front with two points. A pretty woman in this costume is nothing short of charming.

Twine color is now the correct thing for straw hats. Hats are worn large.

Sunshades are large and covered with flowers. They match the dress, or at least follow its coloring.

Small "Greenaway" figures are all the rage for fans, handkerchiefs and designed skirts.

A lady apppeared with a Scotch looking poodle of twenty pounds weight around whose neck was a delicate lilac satin ribbon with the ends hand-painted most daintily with pansies and other floral embellishments. The dog gnaws bones and things like others of his race.

Twine lace is in imitation of Irish and venetian guipure, old French point and other fancies in lace. Some varieties are very costly.

JEWELRY DECORATION.

One of the prettiest decorations in this line for a young lady is an engagement ring. Plain gold is still the style, but diamonds are in high favor with those who don't mind the price. Bailey, Banks & Biddle say that most of the "plain gold" they sell for this purpose, range from ten to twenty-five dollars. Diamond rings run from $25 up to any price you please. There are some charming ones at Bailey's. Lace-pins, bracelets, brooches and all that sort of thing are just as much called for as ever, and the pretty novelties in tinted silver which are delightfully inexpensive are voted exquisitely beautiful.

BITS.

There are 3700 barbers in this city.

"Friends' Meeting" is in session at Fifteenth and Race.

Preparations for the Grand National Sangerfest are in progress, on a magnificant scale.

Strikes are threatened in nearly all the leading branches of labor.

RALPH.

Fishing Creek Items.

The late rains have made the roads very muddy.

Mr. Peter Kline has taken the contract to cut and peal bark on the tract owned by the Montgomery heirs.

Beishline & Bros. with their portable mill and J. P. Creasy's are not the only mills to be there I understand. Mr. Everett is going to put one in to saw Montgomery's logs.

Some of our farmers have planted their corn but the majority have not, and are waiting patiently to see it clear off once more. The grain is springing up finely. Some pieces are looking good, but others are looking very bad. The grass crops are promising.

I have noticed that the Stillwater correspondent has been so very anxious and concerned about people violating the fish law, and would say to the people generally that the violation of the fish law does not consist only in setting hoop nets but that putting in set lines to catch ells is contrary to law, and a case of that kind was tried in our court and the man was fined and paid court charges. So if this be true there are a great many violators of the law.

Our friend W. N. Hosler is doing a right good business at Jonestown.

R. C. Parks, the miller in the Jones mill is doing all that lies in his power to do justice to his customers. Try him, he is very accommodating and will draw a large custom.

The popular merchant spoken of the Forks news of last week is not J. W. Ammerman but is J. M. Ammerman, and S. C. Shive is also incorrect, it is Samuel Shive.

I received a line from Mr. Shives Saturday evening refering me to my mistakes, and would say that the Fishingcreek correspondent is not responsible for that as he did not write them. I suppose it was some new comer in the place and would warn them hereafter to give the names correctly as it oftimes gives offence.

Beautify your homes and make them pleasant and attractive with flowers from Dillon's Green Houses.

Mifflin Items.

Miss Lizzie Watson of Watsontown is at present visiting her numerous friends at this place.

Mr. John Brown the miller, lost a very valuable horse on Friday last. This is the eighth one since he is at the business.

Miss Lizzie Bitler will represent the Lutheran Sunday School at the county convention at Buckhorn.

Mr. C. Harpster bought a Hagerstown Md. thresher. The machine is a separator and will be by far the best one in this township.

Quite a number of the colored men who are employed on the new railroad frequently attend the different Churches. They always behave well and show respect for the house of God.

We frequently notice in the county papers the people cautioned against the "run about" swindlers. We would just say as a word of caution that a "sneak" passed through here a few weeks ago trying to sell lottery tickets; he generally failed but inquired the road to an old crippled gentleman living along the Nescopeck mountain, whom he soon met and persuaded to buy eighteen dollars, worth of tickets. He then said the lottery would be drawn at Bloomsburg in about a week. The swindler left after receiving his money and the man or lottery has never been heard of since nor is he expected by the old man whom he cheated. Should he ever be caught in these parts he might be dealt with like the dog that sucked eggs.

Many of the farmers are in the bark business but not so many at planting corn yet.

Mr. Chas. Reynolds made his appearance again a few days ago. He is formerly of this place but had been for some time at work at Berwick, where he was attacked with fever and spinal disease and lay for many weeks supposed to be at the point of death.

Miss Laura Hagenbuch, of Centre was the guest of Mrs. Horace Creasy, over Sunday.

Harvey Burd has started a wheelwright shop at West Mifflin and in connection with A. Hoffman the blacksmith, is doing a flourishing business.

Something alls our band again. Some of the boys have left. Come boys, we need more help.

A great many of our people attended the funeral of Mr. Hiram Kikendall on Friday.

Closing Exercises.

The public schools of this town were closed on Wednesday afternoon, with appropriate exercises at the Opera House. The hall was tastefully decorated, and around the sides were arranged easels on which were displayed specimens of penmanship, drawing, designing and lettering, all neatly executed. Every available space was filled by the school children and spectators. The stage was occupied by the Board of Directors, Dr. E. E. Higbee, Superintendent of Public Instruction, County Superintendent Grimes, and Col. Freeze.

The order of exercises was announced by W. H. Snyder, principal, and was as follows:

Instrumental Solo, Miss Irene Phillips.

Address by J. C. Brown for Board of Directors.

Vocal Duett, Annie Fox and Cora Hagenbuch.

Address by Dr. Higbee.

Instrumental Trio, Miss Ent, piano, Master J. Pursel, piccolo, and W. Holmes, violin.

Address by Col. J. G. Freeze.

Vocal solo, Miss Mary Hendershott.

Quintette by Misses, Jennie Harman, Cora Hagenbuch, Mary Hendershott, Callie Hendershott, Flora Jones.

J. C. Brown in his remarks paid a high tribute to the Normal School, and said that the aim of the public school was to prepare students to enter the senior class at the Normal, and thus enable it to turn out classes numbering fifties, where now they number only tens; that the success of one is the success of the other.

Dr. Higbee made a very interesting and forcible address. He said there are nearly 900,000 children in the public schools now who are to be the men and women of the future, and therefore the future welfare of the commonwealth depends upon the proper care for these children. The public schools must accomplish the great work that can be done by no other agency.

Col. Freeze spoke of the great changes that have taken place in schools and school houses since he was a boy, and censured those parents who permit their children to run the streets instead of being in school.

Mr. Snyder read a report of the several schools for the past term, and after inviting the audience to examine the work of the pupils, the exercises closed. Our common schools are a just source of pride, and the teachers who so faithfully perform their duties, and the Board of Directors who have managed the affairs of the district so satisfactorily are entitled to the thanks of the public for their efforts.

Root; "I loved thee then, I love thee now" (40 cts.), by Pinsuti, is a love song in three languages, and "O Salutaris" (30 cts.), a sacred duet by M'Cabe, will please choir singers. There is also an easy Piano piece, "She sang among the Flowers" (25 cts.), by Smallwood; "Golden Tress Polka" (30 cts.), by Jewell; and "Claude Duval March" (35 cts.), by LeBaron.

Springs that Fire People out of Cannons.

In 1876 Sig. Farini invented the cannon for firing a performer from its muzzle to a considerable distance, with much noise and smoke, but without any danger to the projectile. The first cannon was operated by India rubber springs, but Farini's patents have covered two other modes of propulsion, one by special springs and the other actuallly by the force of gunpowder, which in the spring cannons is simply used to keep up appearances. When the performer is to be literally "fired out," a heavy barrel in the breach of the sham cannon is loaded with about twice as much powder as would constitute a charge for a shotgun, and the gasses produced by its combustion are set loose in an air chamber at the base of a series of telescoped shells surrounding the person in the cannon. As the shells extend toward the muzzle, like the lengthing of a telescope, they give a rapid impetus to the performer. Near the muzzle two openings are developed, through which pours the black smoke from the explosion, without any danger of burning or blackening the fired out, who is at the moment gyrating through space. The cannon is so arranged that springs can be used if desired, and in that case the explosion of a smaller quantity of powder is required, merely to free the spring. Attempts have been made to get up the cannon trick in this country, but it is fully protected by patents, and the modes by which evasion have been sought have not been encourging. In one case the performer was already darted out into the net when the explosion took place —an entire "give away," as showman say, and in the other a rash performer had his legs driven up into him.—From the New York Sun.

Manursng Trees In Winter.

All fruit trees which do not make a growth of two feet for the longest shoots in a season, need additional stimulating with manure if the ground is clean and well cultivated; or if they stand in grass or happen to be encumbered with weeds, good mellow cultivation must be given them. This is the rule for young trees, and the best time, if manure is applied, is late in autumn or during winter, the earlier the better. but manure appears to do the most good on bearing trees, especially apple trees, often giving annual crops where poor and biennial crops were previously borne. Bearing trees need not grow so rapidly as young trees, but if they do not make annual shoots at least a foot long, they need more manure, or both manure and cultivation. The manure may be spread broadcast in winter, covering the whole surface.

Pipes by the Million.

The red clay pipe is made in this city at the rate of two million a year, worth five or ten cents apiece, or ten or twenty thousand dollars. The clay comes from Martha's Vineyard, Governor's Island, N. Y., and Lake Michigan. Three hundred tons are used in a year. The three kinds of clay are mixed or ground together. A workman with a pile of clay beside him makes from it single rolls of clay, each large enough to make one pipe. The next worker places the clay in a pipe mould, runs a wire into the stem part, puts under a lever and makes the bowl. Fifteen hundred a day are moulded by one man. The moulds may be of various designs to form the decorated bowl. The latest is the "Land League," representing eviction on one side and prison life on the other. In pipes, as in other things, novelties must be given the smoking public, and as those interested in Land Leagues are fair smokers this pipe will be bought for use and for patriotism.

After the moulding process the pipes are laid away to dry or drain until the water is well out of them. They are then put in fire-clay receivers, one hundred and ninety in each, and placed in furnace or kiln to be burnt. The oven holds seventy thousand pipes. They are then heated to a white heat. The red clay pipes has a wooden stem and a silver band. The stems are made by machinery designed for the purpose. They are made black by the process of enameling. The band is made from a circular piece of brass without break of seam, turned into a cylinder about an inch in length. Some of the other pipes are stained, while others are left in the color of the clay to be stained or colored by the smoker.—Providence Journal.

Ivy And Dampness.

It is a popular error to suppose that ivy growing on the walls of a house makes it damp. The attachment of ivy to walls, so far from injuring them and causing dampness, is an advantage. If the walls are dry when planted, ivy will keep them so. If damp, as the plant overspreads their surface the dampness will disappear. Where dampness prevails ivy sucks out the moisture, and its thick folliage will prevent the access of rain to the structure; and thus it is not only a remover but a preventive of dampness. The only danger attending the planting of ivy on buildings is where fissures occur in the walls, in which case the shoots and roots will enter, and, if left undisturbed, their growth will soon begin to tell on the building, and will, by increase of growth, push against the sides of the opening, thereby enlarging it and eventually so weaken the wall as to cause it to fall. Where the wall is sound there is no such danger, for the plant does not make fissures, although quick to discover them.

An Animated Sledge-Hammer.

One of the most singular incidents that has been recorded in a long time occured at Patsalaga creek, in Talbot county, and not very far from Howard Station. Mr. William Heath was driving a cow and young calf along the road and when they came to the creek the cow stopped in order to drink. On the opposite side of the creek and a few feet off stood a large ram. As the cow was drinking she would frequently lift up her head as if she was uneasy about the calf. The ram took this as a banter to fight, and walking up near the cow reared up and gave her a butt centrally in the head and killed the cow almost instantly. Mr. Heath ran up thinking that the cow would soon recover, as he thought she was only stunned, but in this he was mistaken as it was a death-stroke.

Back Ache

POSITIVELY CURED BY

Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters.

Reasons Why they are Preferred to All Other Porous Plasters or External Remedies:

First.
Because they possess all the merit of the strengthening porous plaster, and contain in addition thereto the newly discovered powerful and active vegetable combination which acts with increased rubefacient, stimulating, sedative and counter irritant effects.

Second.
Because they are a genuine pharmaceutical preparation, and so recognized by the profession.

Third.
Because they are the only plasters that relieve pain at once.

Fourth.
Because they will positively cure diseases which other remedies will not even relieve.

Fifth.
Because over 5000 physicians and druggists have voluntarily testified that they are superior to all other plasters or medicines for external use.

Sixth.
Because the manufacturers have received the only medals ever given for porous plasters.
